BEFORE YOU START

- Have a selection of rhyming stories for your child(ren) to choose from. Ask them to listen carefully to the text and say stop when they hear a rhyme.
- Ask your child(ren) to draw the rhyming pairs together on paper. Prompt them to think about what helped them identify rhymes in the story.

Ask your child(ren) how they would sort of pictures. Don't mention rhyming and use this as an opportunity to see who uses what attributes of the words and pictures to define the sort.

- Do they use sounds, initial or rime?
- Do they use meaning?
- What clues does this give you about your learners?
- How can you use these clues to support your learners to find out about rhyme?

TEST IDEAS

- Once your child(ren) have had a chance to review how they would sort the cards, introduce the idea of sorting by rhyme.
  - How would this change their sort?
  - How would they make their decisions about where to group words?

- Let your child(ren) experiment and test ideas try to find ways of sorting out the cards with rhyme.
- Encourage your child(ren) to say the name of the picture clearly and use their listening to group and sort.
- Use mistakes or misconceptions as launch pads for new learning; this can be done through either modelling or questioning.

BUILD ON IDEAS

- In order to extend ideas, you can then add the word cards into the sorting task.
- Find the word cards to match the pictures in their already sorted groups. (Using pre-sorted groups is important as it has your child(ren) focusing on the sounds not the letter patterns of the words when thinking about rhyme).

- Invite your child(ren) to choose a 'rhyming' set of pictures and words to investigate.
- Have your child(ren) organise words and pictures in the rhyming set in a row where the words are under each other.
- Model saying a pair of rhyming words together and emphasising the sounds that rhyme. See if they can think of or find any other words that might in these rhyming families.
